

Assisting families in the Classical Christian education of their children

HISTORY

Somewhere early in 2001, a group of families at Evangelical Presbyterian Church of Annapolis began praying and talking about forming a classical Christian education tutorial service for homeschooling families in the Annapolis area. These committed home schooling families had a desire for their children to be thinkers. At the same time they saw an unmet need to provide an opportunity for other committed homeschooling parents in the Annapolis area to pool resources for providing a classical and Christian education for their children. These families prayed that God would raise up a committee of people including husbands and fathers to spearhead the development of this service. In the fall of 2002 ACTS began meeting for its inaugural year
